More than 400 of New York's most discerning young aesthetes, philanthropists, interior designers and scene staples braved the rain and sported their chicest ensembles for last evening's Young Collectors Night at The Winter Show.

Held at 660 Madison, the former Barneys New York flagship, the annual event, usually held at the Park Avenue Armory, was a homecoming of sorts for the stylish crowd as they explored the once iconic department store's five floors, now filled to the brim with rare antique furniture, art, jewelry and more.

The evening was co-chaired by Jeffrey Caldwell, Sam Dangremond, Michael Diaz-Griffith,

Yuan Fang, Robbie Gordy, Lydia Johnson, Lucinda May, Madeline O'Malley, and Mieke Ten Have, with proceeds supporting East Side House Settlement, a community-based organization serving the Bronx and northern Manhattan.

Care to see who wore what to the fashionable soirée?
